As Chair of the Mental Health Law Group, Jamie represents individuals and families in civil litigation, negotiations and crisis situations specific to mental health issues and/or alcohol/substance use disorders. She guides clients through the complex and intertwined legal and clinical systems to maximize the legal resources available under the Mental Hygiene Law.

Jamie's knowledge extends to inpatient hospitalization matters including retention and treatment over objection hearings as well as consultation and advice regarding discharge planning. In the community setting, she is well-versed in applications for Assisted Outpatient Treatment (also known as Kendra's Law), a valuable tool for individuals who refuse medication and/or mental health services and are frequently hospitalized. Her practice also includes representation of clients in adult guardianship proceedings (Mental Hygiene Law Article 81), Mental Hygiene Warrant proceedings, and Family Court Order of Protection matters.

Recognizing that these complicated mental health issues require a team approach, she collaborates with many healthcare and mental health professionals to develop the best clinical plan and legal course of action. She has experience deploying such resources and advocating for clients across the country.

Jamie is also a member of the Firm's Taxation & Estates and Litigation Groups. The practice encompasses all aspects of estate planning, including wills, trusts, health care proxies and powers of attorney, probate and administration matters, and related disputes in Surrogate's Court.

Jamie was selected by Long Island Business News "40 Under Forty" in 2023 and "Leader in Law" in 2024. She was featured in LIBN's January 11, 2024 article, "Mental Health Attorneys Address Growing Need for Services on Long Island". Jamie has been published in professional journals and newspapers across the country. She is also a frequent lecturer on various mental health issues, guardianship matters and related topics.

Jamie received her J.D. from the Maurice A. Deane School of Law at Hofstra University with a Concentration in Child and Family Advocacy. She is admitted to practice in New York and New Jersey.
